CHICAGO, Nov. 27.—Ope cators were ago surprised at the action of the wheat market today, which, after a lower opening, became strong and closed quite firm at higher prices. The opening was very un-settled with sales from 1/6 fc below yesterday's closing figures, bet almost immediately rallied, selling up 134c from the inside point, reacted 34c and sold up 134c, reaching a point 2c above in side figures. From this point prices settled back ic, again rallied to outside figures and the closing was 1%c higher than yesterday.

Corn again ruled easier and a lower range of prices was established. The feeling on the whole was considerably weaker. Opening sales were \c under closing prices of yesterday, after which the ms rket was steady for a time, became easier and %65%c lower for December than yes-

Oats were quiet and steady. A feature of the trading was increased business in transferring contracts from December to May at 4c difference.

Quite an active special speculative trade was reported in mess pork, but the feeling was somewhat weak. Offerings were liberal early and opening sales were made at 10@12%c declines, which was quickly followed by a further depreciation of apaga24c, later the market showed rather more steadiness and pricess rallied 75 of 10c and the market closed steady. Trading was moderately active in lard and the feeling was easier. Prices receded 12% of 15c. but rallied again 234@5c and closed

A Plane Manefacturer's Plaint.

A member of one of the best known plane manufacturing firms in this city told me recently that the business is being seriously affected by the rapid increase in the number of makers of cheep instruments. The newspapers are full of the advertisements of these decoptive individuals who for $100 or even less will sell you a plane. Aithough the price of one of these frauds as compared with that of a first class instrument is ridieulously small, my friend assured me that the profit derived from its sale is quite large and it can easily pay its share of its maker's advertising bills and leave a tidy sum over. The greenest of woods, the cheapest of strings, the most economical substitute for ivory in the keys and the shimiest of third rate varnish enter into its composition, while the workmen who hastily put it together work by the piece and are past grand masters in the art of scamping. A reliable instrument made of the best materials and in the plainest of cases cannot be sold at a living profit for less than four or five times the cost of these impositions which now food the market.—

OLD KEYSTONE

-P. G STEVENS Agent .--

The Glory of Moscow. The glory of Moscow is the Kremlin, which is really the citadel, and within its stout walls are scores of churches and palaces. Here are the Cathedral of the Assumption of the Blessed Virgin, the Cathedral of the Archangel Michael, and dozens of other churches, the arsenal surdozens of other churches, the arsenal sur-rounded by 850 cannon taken from the French during the disastrous retreat of 1812. The magnificence of the churches and palaces in the Kremlin surpasses be-lief. The Church of the Annunciation has its floor inlaid with agate, cornelian, jasper, chalcedony and other precious stones, thousands and thousands of dol-lars worth of gems being thus laid down for a floor. In the Cathedral of St. Izaak for a floor. In the Cathedral of St. Izuak, Alexander will see the tombs of all the czars down to the time of Peter the Great. all his successors. There are some dozens of tombs of emperors and empresses, for each crar chose to have a shrine to him-propriety and truth might be said of the tombs of the czars, for some boast of a wealth of over $1,000,000 in precious stones which adorn each part of the shrine above the tomb.

In the bremlin are preserved the imperial crowns and regalia of Russia, over twenty crowns are here, comprising not only those belonging to Russia proper, but those of countries conquered by the Russian armies, from the crown of Siberia to the crown of Finland, that of Poland, the Crimea, Astrakhan, the Caucasus and others being among the number, together with orts, scepters, swords and royal chains and other jewels too numerous to count, and besides all these diamonds, the imperial treasuries, too numerous to be set or even to be counted, so that a distinguished foreigner who many years ago, by special favor, obtained access to that part of the Kremlin in which are stored these important treasures, said that they ite in piles, in golden bowls and in silver cups, in such abundance as to defy enumeration or valuation.
